A study day on: Languages and interaction February 23, 2015 - ISL- Nabeul

The Organizing Committee of ISL-Nabeul with the collaboration of the Association for the Promotion and Protection of the Arabic Language are pleased to announce the organization of a study day on languages and Interaction. We want this occasion to be a chance for scholars to meet and exchange their views on languages as dynamic and evolving processes, a topic that is gaining in interest in our multicultural world where globalization is following an unprecedentedly swift process.

We are interested in the following issues, though speakers may contribute a new area of research that is directly related to the topic and innovative.

- New and old conceptualizations of the mother tongue and second languages.
- Languages as evolving processes.
- Determining Language interaction: factors and aspects.
- Language interference.
- Languages and multiculturalism.
- Language interference and translation.

Abstracts, presentations and submissions of papers

- Presentations can be in Arabic, English, French or Italian.
- The contents of the communication must be original and read (and eventually published) for the first time.
- Abstracts must not exceed 300 words.
- Participants are required to send a short biography along with the abstract.
- The deadline for abstract submissions is: 30/12/2014.
- Answers will be sent forth before 15/01/2015.
- A reading committee will evaluate abstracts and will accept the maximum number of eight.
- Speakers will receive an honorary Certificate of Participation

- The papers to be published must not be longer than 15 pages.
- The paper must apply to the fundamental research, writing and publication standards.
- The deadline for paper submissions is: 15/02/2015.
